The men came round and searched every room, but could not find Jenkins. Many of the men who assisted in the search were members of the party who rescued the prisoner from him, who gave security for their appearance at the Court.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Approaching Termination of the Struggle for the Speakership.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Jan. 27.

There seems to be a general consciousness to-day that the Nebraska men cannot hold out longer against the organization of the House, and the proceedings of to-morrow are looked forward to with much interest.

It is understood again that the plurality resolution will be sustained to-morrow by Democrats enough to carry it. S.

New-Effect of the Kansas Message—Outrage upon Gov. Reeder—The Records in the Hands of Gov. Reeder.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Jan. 26, 1856.

THE KANSAS MESSAGE.

The President's Kansas Message has fallen, still-born, upon Congress. No one pretends to deem it matter of much political importance, and every man who chooses to speak freely on the subject admits that there could have been no good motive or reason for sending it in at the present time. It was not necessary to the preservation of public order in Kansas, for the troubles there are not half so menacing now as they were months ago, when the President did not deem it necessary to take any steps whatever. Nor was it necessary in order to the obtainment of money to provide against any emergency which may arise,—for the President is now without the means at his disposal to repress domestic insurrection.

THE MOTIVES WHICH PROMPTED IT.

Several considerations of a discreditable nature are suggested as the impelling motive of the message in the absence of any good one. The first of these was the expectation that the executive proclamation of civil war would frighten the Anti-Nebraska men into breaking up their line of stern opposition to the Administration in the organization of the House. That ruse has signally failed, and is more likely to induce professed Administration men to yield the plurality resolution, by which alone the House can ever be organized, than it is to draw a single vote from Mr. BANKS. Another consideration suggested by a friend of the President, who was quite indignant at the charge that the message was designed to frighten the House into an organization, is, that its real purpose was to affect the New-Hampshire election, by getting out a little set-off against the Pro-slavery doctrine of the annual message.

FOREIGN BUTTERS AND EMIGRANT ASSOCIATIONS.

True, the "set-off" don't amount to much, for the Kansas message itself is offensively Pro-Slavery; but there is shown that the President dare condemn the conduct of the "border ruffians," although he makes it all right again with them by justifying their acts as a counterpoise to the operations of the Emigrant Aid Associations! And this is one of the most sophistical points of the entire message. Mark it! Citizens of New-England, desirous that Kansas should be peopled by men devoted to freedom, thought fit to aid free men, imbued with free principles, to travel the many hundreds of miles intervening between Kansas and the Eastern States, and to settle permanently in the new Territory, intending and expecting to make themselves homes there, and to mould the institutions under which they proposed to live and die. These Eastern emigrants went peacefully, molesting nobody, and asking nothing but "non-intervention" at the hands of those who looked upon their quietly earnest movements with jealous surprise. And yet the President boldly assumes that this was all wrong—that the Free States were not justified in taking steps to overcome, in behalf of their own adventurous citizens, the natural advantages of position enjoyed by the Slave States bordering Kansas! And this peaceful immigration of bona fide settlers is deemed by the President to excuse, if not justify, irruptions of armed ruffians from Missouri, who purpose no residence in Kansas, but whose proximity thereto enables them to enter the Territory in the morning, to deposit their illegal votes, or murder in cold blood settlers who dare proclaim the rights of freemen, and to return again to their homes in Missouri ere nightfall, unless the daytime shall have hatched some brutal scheme of violence and wrong to be perpetrated at the fitting hour of midnight. The people of New-Hampshire will not be swindled into the support of FRANKLIN PIERCE and his Slavocracy by any such specious pretence as this.

GROSS OUTRAGE UPON GOV. REEDER.

One evident purpose of the Message indicates another probable reason for its transmission to Congress. No man can fail to see that its most pungent ingredient is a malicious and cowardly assault upon Governor REEDER—malicious and cowardly because he who makes it deliberately takes the victim of his malice at great disadvantage, inserting his charges against him in an official document, which is certain to be scattered all over the land, and to infuse its poison in the public mind long before Governor REEDER can obtain the opportunity—which the President knows he seeks—to defend himself on the floor of the House. There was no shadow of public necessity for this course, and every gentleman who looks at the facts must feel that to gratify purely private motives, or to accomplish basely partisan purposes, the President of the United States has stooped to the perpetration of just such an outrage as would procure for a chimney sweep the jeers and hisses of every passer by. If he hopes, by thus prejudicing the case, to cut Gov. REEDER off, altogether, from his opportunity to be heard at the bar of the House, let me remind him that "the hopes of the wicked shall perish." The House of Representatives will not degrade itself so much as to emulate so ungenerous and so undignified an example.

AN EXPLANATION WANTED.

One point more,—the President professes holy horror of some land speculations, in which he charges Governor REEDER and Judges ELMORE and JOHNSON to have been engaged, and for participation in which an honorable and valuable officer of the army has been cashiered, and the three gentlemen above named are said to have been removed. Now, if the land speculations really constituted the crime for which these gentlemen were punished, how is it that Mr. ISAACS, the District-Attorney of Kansas, escaped the guillotine? He was just as deeply involved in the land purchases as was Governor REEDER. There is no shadow of difference that I can learn in their respective cases. Attorney-General CUSHING addressed Mr. ISAACS a letter on the subject, and a hold, and perhaps impudent reply was returned. Mr. ISAACS expected to be removed for his letter, if not for his speculations, and became a candidate for Congress in opposition to Mr. WHITFIELD, the Pro-Slavery Administration candidate.

WHAT WAS THE MATTER?

But pending the canvass he suddenly withdrew, left the field to WHITFIELD, and has ever since retained his office of District-Attorney. Will somebody enlighten us as to the bargain by means of which these results were brought about? Pending an explanation it is but natural to suppose the

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Jan. 27.

It may not, perhaps, be generally known that during the present unorganized condition of the House of Representatives, no money can be drawn from the United States Treasury for the payment of members of that branch of Congress. In this condition of affairs, A. J. GLESSNERNER, Esq., the Sergeant-at-arms of the last House, and who is still acting in that capacity, having been applied to by members of Congress for money to meet their pressing necessities, procured funds from some of the Pennsylvania Banks on his own responsibility, and paid it out to members, taking therefor their receipts. The bankers of Washington, individually, have not loaned to Mr. GLESSNERNER one dollar, but the banks have, liberally.

This course of the Sergeant-at-Arms has had the effect of depriving some of the brokers on the Avenue of many a good, fat shave, and causes much complaint among them.

There is now due to members on account of per diem and mileage about $200,000, of which it is said Mr. GLESSNERNER has paid to them about $80,000.

The Union proposes a union of Democrats and Americans on the following principles: That the Democrats return Mr. OLE as the candidate on their platform, and that the Americans also nominate him, at the same time reaffirming their own platform—it being understood that neither make any concession of principle while voting for the one candidate.

The Trial of Messrs. Coburn and Dalton.

BOSTON, Saturday, Jan. 26.

The trial of Messrs. COBURN and DALTON progresses slowly, and will probably occupy two or three days of next week. JOSIAH PORTER, who was also severely beaten by the defendants in this case for alleged intimacy with their wives, was on the stand nearly four hours. His testimony was not important, being confined by the ruling of the Court to his general intimacy with SUMNER, and the identification of a letter alleged to have been written by SUMNER to Mrs. DALTON. The letter itself was not put in as evidence.

Sad Accident on the Delaware River.

PHILADELPHIA, Saturday, Jan. 26, 1856.

This afternoon as a large company were upon the Delaware River, opposite the upper part of the city, the ice gave way, carrying down a sleigh containing a gentleman and four ladies. One of the ladies, a widow by the name of ALBERSOTT, was drowned. The others were rescued.

PHILADELPHIA, Sunday, Jan. 27.

Mrs. ALBERSOTT, who was drowned yesterday, in consequence of the ice in the Delaware giving way, was the widow of Col. FRANK ALBERSOTT. Her only daughter, twenty-three years of age, was also drowned. The body of the latter has not yet been recovered.

Personal Description of Faustin the First.

An American clergyman, who spent a winter in Hayti in the year 1853, gives the following description of the black Emperor, FAUSTIN the First.

"The present Emperor of Hayti, FAUSTIN SOULOUQUE, or, as he is officially known, "His Majesty, FAUSTIN THE FIRST," had, previously to his election as President, been unknown to fame save as a military chieftain. His first connection with the army was in the capacity of a servant to a distinguished General. He has ever been regarded, by those who have known him, as a man of moderate abilities and acquirements, but of undoubted bravery.

My first view of him was as he was riding through the city of Port au Prince, as his custom is on every Sunday morning. His color is the dingiest coal black; he has not the thick lips and other characteristic features that usually accompany this color. He rode a fine gray horse, imported from the United States, and was accompanied by a hundred or more of his lifeguards, on horseback, preceded by cavalry music, and passed through the principal streets of the city, uncovering his head and dispensing his bows and his smiles to the crowds as he rode rapidly past them. He was dressed, as he has always been when I have seen him, far more richly than I have ever seen any of our military officers dressed. He wore the common crescent-shaped military cap, with rich plumes and heavy golden trimmings. His coat was blue broadcloth, with standing collar; and the entire front, the collar, the seams of the sleeves and the back, the edges of the skirt, &c., were overlaid with heavy golden trimmings. Besides this, various figures were wrought in gold upon the back and other parts of the coat, so that a large part of the cloth was covered. But a part of his vest could be seen, as his coat was buttoned with one button near his neck; but all that did appear showed nothing but gold. His trowsers were white, trimmed on each side of the seams with gold lace. He was not, however, in full dress, as he had on common boots, instead of a pair most richly trimmed with velvet and gold that he sometimes wears. His age is little above fifty, his form erect, near six feet in height, and well proportioned. His horsemanship is of the most accomplished character. This attracts the attention of foreigners, and their universal remark is that in this respect he is rarely equaled. He usually rides to the Bureau of the Port, the Custom-house, and through several of the principal streets of the city, attended by a few of his guards, twice during the week. As I had seen him thus riding rapidly through the city, I was perplexed to reconcile his face, which seemed amiable and benignant, with what I knew of his character; but subsequently, as I stood near him, when he dismounted at church, and then sat within a few feet of him during a long service, I have been relieved of this difficulty, for I could see in his face when in repose an index of his stern and merciless heart. Those familiar with the circumstances of his election as President of the Republic (the present Emperor of France, be it remembered, has most closely followed the black Emperor in the method he has taken to reach his present position) will remember that the honor came upon him most unexpectedly. Parties were so nearly balanced that neither of them was able to succeed, and after several unavailing ballots he was taken up as an available military candidate, and moreover as one that the leaders thought could easily be managed. But they soon found out their mistake. The very men who had procured his election were the first to suffer. In a very short time he dismissed them from the ministry and chose a cabinet to his own liking, and from that day onward he has sacrificed whoever has dared to oppose him, or been suspected of plotting his overthrow, with apparently as little feeling as he would have taken the life of a centipede. It is a very difficult matter to judge of the future in regard to the Haitian Government and people, but to all appearances he bids fair to be their ruler for many years to come. At least if he be not it will not be because he would hesitate to sacrifice hetacombs of opposing subjects to secure this end."

PROTESTANT HOSPITAL IN NEW-ORLEANS.—THE WILL OF AN OLD BACHELOR.—The New-Orleans Delta, announcing the death of Mr. JOHN D. FINK, a wealthy old bachelor of that city, says:

"The value of his succession, we are informed, may be safely estimated at $500,000; of this immense amount he has left about $60,000 to his friends and relatives. He concludes by devoting the remainder of his large fortune to the purpose of erecting an asylum for destitute Protestant widows, to be called the 'Fink Asylum,' and authorizing Mr. BURLENNEMICK to appoint three trustees to carry the latter portion of the will into effect. Finally, he wills that his body shall be interred in the Protestant Cemetery on Girod-street, and a marble monument erected over it, fenced in with an iron railing—the whole cost of which is not to exceed $8,000."

☞ The Pennsylvania Legislature has under consideration a series of resolutions calling upon the Congressmen from that State to press for an appropriation to complete the defences of the Delaware River. The preamble says:

"In the present unsettled state of the world, the people of Pennsylvania cannot but regard with real anxiety the exposed position of Philadelphia, their principal city and commercial emporium; they, consequently, feel the deepest solicitude about every step to be taken for its protection, and watch with the liveliest interest the progress of the works intended for the defence of the Delaware River."

STATE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN.—Professors E. S. CARR and DANIEL READ, of the State University of Wisconsin, have been duly inaugurated. From the report of the Board of Regents read on the occasion, we learn that the number of students during the past year is ninety-three. Of these, forty-three reside in Madison, and fifty in other parts of the State, or in other States. Many of those from Madison belonged to families who have been attracted thither by the educational facilities afforded by the University. The report recommends a separate Preparatory Department, and the establishment of Medical and Law Departments. The whole value of the property and lands belonging to the institution, six years ago, was $120,000. This has increased, under the judicious management of the fund, until, in addition to the University buildings and grounds, valued at $320,000, it is now estimated at $200,000.

AN INTERESTING CHURCH SUIT.—The Richmond Whig, of Tuesday, states that a case of great interest is now being tried before the Court of Appeals in that city. The parties to the controversy are the Methodist Episcopal Churches, North and South, and while this particular case only involves a title to church property in one locality, (the County of Spotsylvania,) the decision will have an influence upon other suits growing out of the division in the Church. Judges ALLEN, LEE, MONCURE, DANIEL, and SCHERER are present, and some of the most eminent legal talent in the State is employed in the argument.

Mr. Rice renews the argument held by some of his predecessors in favor of a new graduation of the school year; the change to be effected in such a manner that the assessment shall be, in the main of the wealth upon which it is imposed. On this point the report is earnest and more eloquent than upon any other. It says:

"Upon the assessment depends the amount of money, the State cannot raise, and the children grow up in ignorance. Under the direction of the Comptroller of Public Instruction, a department of industry remains unfurnished with more information. The consequence is, the course of intelligence existing among our people in the circumstances which enables our manufacturers and merchants to maintain their wealth and get livelihood at a cheaper cost than the laborers of Europe. Actual consumption only calls for a pinched and scanty subsistence—the direct of mental cramping being more than supplied by partial education. It is very obvious that what is to the private interest of some individual, is also the general interest of the community. It is less obvious, but no less true, that he who can afford to have his daughter educated and poor any more than he can afford to have him educationally diseased or criminally asinine. The increase of private wealth is being constituted small that of the public; stock from which, through whatever transformation and exchanges, its cause is derived. We are thus brought to the unpopular necessity of in practice, that each individual is interested in the school system of the district of all the children of children, and consequently and the education, in proportion to his stake in the general wealth. It is unnecessary to resort to either political or moral considerations to sustain the policy and justice of taxation for the general education, though they are so much more apparent. Reasoning from necessitants as well as the results, that they have too commonly been resorted upon, to the overshadowing of the economical and political considerations, which it follows upon the truth, that the highest political and moral and political progress is inseparable from that advance in the power of man over the forces of nature which gives the constituent wealth.

The law being founded upon a recognized necessity, adapts very with the needs it is intended to supply. Thus are directly approachable by an enumeration of the children to be instructed, and the ability to see by the assessed valuation of the property. Any law can be adapted to the circumstances only of a stationary state. Former superintendents have recommended that a tax of one mill upon the dollar should be levied instead of the present assessment. A tax of three quarters of a mill would raise upon the present valuation the little more than $1,000,000, the amount of the present tax being something [illegible] which surplus [illegible] made in the bills during the next year and which [illegible] to supply those deficiencies. Attempts upon [illegible] bills, [illegible] to counteract them and strong [illegible] involve a painful position, the honest pride of the taxpayer and the needs of his family for physical comfort made more humiliating by the narrow spirit in which exemptions are often claimed.

Twenty-five districts have been organized under the law of 1853, for the establishment of Free Union Schools. The statute, however, is complained of on account of its obscurity—particularly those portions which relate to the tenure of office of the Trustees, and the division of District. The attention of the Legislature is invited to this subject.

The State Normal School, in operation for eleven years, has instructed 4,795 pupils, of whom 859 have received diplomas. The proportion of females is larger than that of the males; 104 females to 64 males is the present proportion.

The day which saw the abolition of the office of County Superintendent (Nov. 13, 1847) was signalized by the Legislature by the adoption of a provision to encourage the formation of Teachers' Institutes. During the year 1854-5, 36 Institutes were established, and 2,600 teachers and candidates were instructed in them in the theory and practice of instruction. The Institutes are organized generally in October and November. Mr. Rice commends them to favorable regard, and suggests an increase of the appropriation to $100. Frequent changes of teachers are severely deprecated; but the relations of Primary Schools to the higher Seminaries are warmly spoken of, and a more intimate connection between the two classes is urged in this sensible way:

"The common schools are the nurseries of the more advanced institutions, and the latter must thrive in proportion to the industry of their friends in cultivating and multiplying thrifty shoots in the former, in transplanting them by easy gradations to the seats of nature learning, and in making the latter, in a wider sense than now, public institutions, instead of the dependants of limited classes."

The health of the pupils in the Deaf and Dumb and Blind Asylums has been excellent. The Indians applied for aid—especially the St. Regis tribe, whose condition is unsatisfactory. City Schools (New-York, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, &c.) are in an excellent, happy, useful way. Township superintendence is disliked by the Superintendent, and County Officers are recommended, but Boards of Education for rural districts are discouraged. Mr. Rice's recommendations, summed up in brief, at the end of a long and entertaining report, are as follows:

1. That the annual meetings of all the school districts shall be held on a fixed and uniform day, early in October, the first Tuesday, for example.

2. That the school year shall be, for all purposes, regarded as terminating on the 30th day of September, corresponding with the fiscal year of the State and that all statistics, financial or otherwise, shall have reference to that year.

3. That such statistics be reported directly to the Department, by the town superintendents, unless the Legislature shall provide some intermediate school officers qualified for the duty of digesting them.

4. That the sum appropriated for equal distribution among the school districts, be reduced to the income of the School Fund, and the appropriation from the revenue of the U. S. Deposit Fund, and that a rule based upon the number of teachers be prescribed for the enumeration of districts, at least in cities and villages, where the territorial division by districts exists.

5. That the law for the establishment of Union Free Schools be amended, and that the principle be so extended as to permit any district to levy a tax, for the purpose of defraying teachers' wages.

6. That the power of taxing for school purposes be confined strictly to its territorial limits.

7. The school districts be made quasi corporations, like towns, and be chartered to sue and to be sued in their corporate name and character.

8. That no portion of the library money appropriated to each district the current year, be only be necessary to defray the expense of furnishing each district with a copy of the Revised Code of Public Instruction, and Digest of Decisions thereupon, be retained and applied to that purpose.

9. That Inspectors of Schools, at the election of Superintendents for each County, or Assembly district, with sufficient compensation to secure the attention of competent and responsible persons of their whole energies to the work of local supervision.

10. That the State tax for the support of schools be made three-quarters of a mill on each dollar of the assessed valuation of property, instead of the fixed sum of $1,000,000.

There is some talk of organizing a Young Men's Christian Union in Rochester, on a similar to the institutions of the same name in Boston, Cleveland, Detroit and New-York.

The cause why on Monday evening, Jan. 7, shall prove [illegible] and visited 17 families of them. Accompanied by an organ-grinder, we met the rendezvous. We went to Greenwich, Leroy-place, Wooster, Sullivan, Washington and Charlton-streets. Among these 17 families were 4 boarding-houses, containing in the aggregate more than 100 individuals, children comprised. The remaining 11 families contained about 150 more, making, &c. I spoke to them of the necessity they have of being acquainted with the purpose the Ladies Union kindly offer every facility. I told them that their ignorance is the cause of their low condition, &c.

On such an occasion, I learned some facts, which I think well to state.

On an average, it is calculated that we see than 100 adults, and 40 children, arrive in this country every month. The most of them leave their native land destitute of any means, and on arriving here, are employed by the organ-grinders. The latter are only few, and could not conveniently over without letting out organs, as they own money or property to an amount varying from $1 up to $30,000. This will not appear to exaggeration if we consider that they lease their organs at 10, 25 and 50 cents a day, according to the quality of the organ, and that they own from 20 to 100 organs. Sometimes they cannot get as many men as they want for leasing their organs, and then write to their country, (Genoa coasts) pay the passage and retinue from there. The strong hold of both organ-grinders and owners is in the Winter, New-York and Philadelphia, but in the Summer the forces spread all over the United States.

Another vocation that they follow is by knocking at the doors, and presenting a paper purporting to be an address of some poor widow in the guise for a subscription, with the signatures and contributions of the most influential gentlemen of this City. Of course these are counterfeit. The writers of them papers are only two, actually in New-York, and they who go begging in that manner, are, thank God, only a few. These writers, who are well paid, counterfeit letters of recommendation, passports and other documents. They are hated by the most—even by those who ask for their service. In justice to the many, I must say that this abusive beggary and this abuse of a public charity, is regretted by everybody. In general, benevolent and religious societies will work amongst this low class; there is every reason to believe it would produce a good effect, as they profess a good moral principle and hearty desire for improvement.

George Law and the Conference.

The Morris Standard of Trenton, N. J., publishes the following private letter from George Law to Lewis R. Parker. The latter gentleman, in some prefatory remarks, says: "The letter so completely refutes the many slanderous charges preferred against the author, that we have concluded to submit it to the consideration of the public. This must be our apology for producing it. It speaks for itself."

NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, JAN. 1, 1856.

DEAR SIR: I received your letter and its inclosure last evening. I do not regard it as any departure from the rule I have prescribed for my conduct, not to interfere personally in the proper expectation of my political principles, in the election now pending before the people of the United States, and in which my name has been mingled, so one that possibly might be placed by the American Party on its ticket at the next Presidential election, so anxious to you my acknowledgments for your kindness in vindicating my character, as you have, in the article you inclosed to me. Nor do I conceive it indelicate or improper for me to say to you, that I am grateful to you for your defence. Not on account of any influence it may have in reference to the American nomination, so much, as because it repels charges against my integrity of conduct, as a man, and as a citizen. The charges alluded to in the article are false and foul aspersions, destitute of a shadow of truth.

MY LAW DOES NOT TEMPT THE PRESIDENCY, VALUING HIS REPUTATION MORE THAN THE OFFICE.

Exalted as I regard the chief magistracy of this confederacy of sovereign States, I do not seek it. The man who dares seek it is unworthy of it. It is a trust of transcendant dignity the highest on earth, but it is also one of equal responsibility, and for the faithful execution of its duties, I believe, an occupy it have a fearful accountability to their country and to their God. But I hold my reputation as a man dearer and more valuable to myself, to my partner in life and to my children, than any political position, however high, to which I could be preferred. Office would cease to relish honor on any man if dishonorable means were employed to obtain it, and especially are those related to in the charges you defend me against dishonorable. A Philadelphia paper sent to me yesterday, (marked) alludes to me as having "plenty of money" and disposed "to spend it freely," and as having in consequence "great influence in the primary elections" in this State.

HOW HE HAS EN MONEY AND HOW HE WON'T SPEND IT.

Whatever may be the fact in reference to my private pecuniary circumstances, the means I have accumulated have been earned by no little personal toil, and I do not feel that it is indelicate or sycophantical for me also to say, by my honest industry and frugality; always gratefully acknowledging the favor of divine Providence. What I have had sense sufficient to earn and save, I trust I may have sense enough to keep for more useful and honorable and worthy purposes, than to spend it in attempts to corrupt the elective franchise. I have been told by friends that an Easton (Pa.) paper, and a paper published in your town, (I think it is called the Gazette, but am not certain,) have also assailed me in like manner, but I have not seen the articles. All such charges, by whomsoever or wherever made, are utterly untrue. I should despise myself if there was any foundation in truth for them.

LET EVERYBODY FOR IT THAT WANTS IT.

So, too, I have been informed of some individuals having made some allegations verbatim and in two or three instances friends of mine have taken some pains to trace the slanderers to their source, and it is a suggestive fact that in enough cases the inventors turned out to be persons who had manifested some solicitude to induce me to stand aside for a compromise, but these advances had been rebuked. When anything bearing the slightest appearance of a bias of such object has been made by letter to myself, it has met with silent contempt. If I have misunderstood any gentleman in this respect, I most certainly regret it, and will atone for my error. Since the charges referred to have been preferred against me, I have inclined to the opinion that justice to my country, my party and myself, may require the prompt publication of every letter containing any proposition or suggestion looking to such object, which is demanded of a man in which he not consider the recipient of an insult to himself is under any obligation not to expose those who perpetrate the insult.

MY LAW DEFIES THE ELEMENTS OF HIS CHARACTER.

Early and late all what may be opposed to me politically, and any personal enemies I cannot suppose that I (though I know of some common lot of men in this country) have any political influence in which I have [illegible] to be counteracted, [illegible] I have made no promises or [illegible] of any kind. I do not believe any friend of mine [illegible] I have made no promises or [illegible] of any kind. I do not believe any friend of mine [illegible] I have expressed in this respect have been disregarded.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,

GEORGE LAW.

LEWIS R. PARKER, Esq., Trenton, N. J.

Letter from Lewis D. Campbell, of Ohio.

GENTLEMEN: The struggle to elect a Speaker has [illegible] the country and the personal relations which it has [illegible] regard to my course in this contest. I have given my opinions at length in my speeches in the House, and I have nothing to add to them. I have been [illegible] tities. I have sacrificed [illegible] virtues, whether [illegible] trusting further delay to the [illegible] private views, as [illegible] voted to a respected report for my vacation for voting against an election of Speaker [illegible] I came into Congress, [illegible] Butler, in 1849, when there were [illegible] prominent candidates, being, Messrs. Winthrop and Cone. The Free-Soil party was [illegible] Messrs. Giddings, Wilson, [illegible] and others, who held the balance of power. After a protracted struggle many efforts were made to adopt a plurality rule. Although a supporter of Mr. Winthrop, I united with the Free-Soil men of the Union and unfortunately voted against the rule, [illegible] was of doubtful constitutionality, and a departure from the uniform rule given in the exposition of the Government of Massachusetts Bay. It was finally adopted, and the result was that a House, a majority of which was elected as advocates of the "Wilmot proviso," refused to apply it to the territories to the Territories acquired from Mexico, which, by the laws of that Government, had been previously dedicated to free institutions, and caused the legislation on the Slavery question by the enactment of the Fugitive Slave Law, which Southern Rights party, as recommended by Mr. Clay and the Compromise Committee of the Senate.

On one occasion during the contest reported to, when the plurality resolution was before the House, Mr. Giddings proposed the following substitute, in the progress of which I fully concurred:

"Whereas the election of the Speaker of this body is one of the highest and most important duties and trust in the members, and the proper discharge of which is dear to every House of Representatives since the adoption of the Constitution, a majority of all the votes has been regarded as necessary to a choice of that officer; and whereas the freedom of debate has ever been regarded as dear to the interests of American liberty; therefore,

Resolved, That a majority of votes ought to elect a Speaker by a plurality of votes, while the minority are not permitted to discuss the propriety or constitutionality of such choice, will be [illegible] in [illegible] of dangerous tendency, and ought not to be adopted."

During the last week of this session, when it was suggested to me by the friends who kindly supported me, that the adoption of this simple plurality resolution would insure success, I again avowed my opposition to it.

Without elaborating on the subject, my reasons for voting against it now I will state:

1. That I am not fully satisfied that it is not an infraction of the spirit of the Constitution.

2. That it is an abandonment of a uniform usage, which did not in 1849, and I fear would not now, promote the success of the principles which I advocate.

3. Because I have reason to apprehend that its adoption at this time will result in giving the organization of the House to the friends of the Nebraska act.

4. Because, aside from principle, I am not disposed to stultify my past record until I am satisfied it is wrong; certainly not until the public interest demands such a sacrifice, and a change of my position would settle the "vexed question."

I give these reasons briefly now, from a regard to those who have requested them in respectful terms. To the outsiders here who have "jobs" in view and to the editors elsewhere who have denounced me as a "traitor" to the principle I have always advocated and still adhere to, I feel indifferent. I am neither to be led as the puppet of the hour nor to be driven under the lash of the latter.

Very truly yours, &c.

LEWIS D. CAMPBELL.

Message of the Governor of Mississippi.

Governor McRAE's message to the Legislature of Mississippi alludes to several topics in which the people of Louisiana are deeply interested. The Governor refers at much length to the railroad system of the State, and speaks of the progress and prospects of the New-Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad in the following terms:

This road forms one of the most important lines throughout our State, and in its connections with other roads, one of the most important lines in the United States. Its means are inadequate, if they were available, to construct portions of it, if not the whole line, gradually, but slowly. It requires additional aid to give to it that progress which is merited, and which the great interests of the country so imperiously demand.

The Governor recommends to the Legislature to increase the Revenue so as to raise a surplus in the Treasury of $300,000, to be invested in stock, in cash payments, annually to the Jackson, Mobile and Ohio, and Central Railroads, in proportion to the extent of their lines within the limits of the State, to be applied to the purchase of, or payment of iron rails, when the road beds are in readiness for the iron superstructure. It is likewise recommended that all moneys loaned at interest to these companies, or invested in their stock, or spent in the State, be exempt from taxation until the several roads are completed. The appropriations to be continued for five years. This would give to each road, within that period, a contribution of $125,000, which would be of sensible aid in the prosecution of their several works.

Upon the subject of Federal relations, Gov. McRae speaks in exceedingly plain terms. He transmits to the General Assembly of Mississippi the Abolition resolutions received from the Legislatures of Maine, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Michigan and Pennsylvania; reviews the position of Mississippi in reference to the question at issue, and recommends the Legislature that she has enumerated as measures which would justify resistance, any interference by Congress with Slavery in the States, or with the slave trade between the States; or any action by Congress on the subject of Slavery within the District of Columbia; the refusal of Congress to admit a new State into the Union on the grounds of her tolerating Slavery within her limits; the passage of a law by Congress prohibiting Slavery in any of the Territories, or the repeal of the Fugitive Slave law. After dwelling somewhat on the propriety of adhering firmly to these principles, Gov. McRae says:

"I intimate my intention to the Legislature, in response to the resolutions of Maine, to return the resolutions unanimously reaffirming the position of Mississippi, with a calm, temperate and dignified exposition of our rights, and the determination to maintain them at all hazards. If, then, Maine and our Northern sisters shall make the issue of the Union with us in the Constitution, the responsibility will be with them, and the right with us, whatever may be the result."

The message abstains from abuse of the American Party, and barely alludes to the exciting contest which terminated in the Governor's election.

SAMPLES OF WOOL.—The Commissioner of Patents received a few days since, from Rev. Messrs. CLAY DEAN, Chaplain of the Senate, some samples of American wool, of the finest quality. This wool was raised by his cousin, who resides near Big Springs, Walton County, Georgia, and is very soft and silky to the touch, possessing a high degree of elasticity, and much resembling in the Saxon variety. The samples have been placed in the Patent Office where they may be inspected by those who have already been received at this office.

From the Missouri Democrat, Jan. 16.

Through letters received from Fort Pierre by express, we have news to the 10th of December. The troops which are stationed at that place for the protection of Whites against the Indians, are comfortably housed in the timber skirting the Missouri. Snow commenced falling on the 3d of October, and since then the weather has been very severe.

General Harney had ordered out a detail of a hundred men to erect a bridge upon an excursion across the river. They were to issue on the 10th and have prepared the sleds for the service, but the day for starting had not been fixed, as the General was awaiting dispatches from Major Rowe, whom he had sent down as the Head of Cows and from whom nothing had been heard up to the time of the departure of the express. Some of the Indians have been in and had a talk with the General in command, and they finally engaged about the 10th inst. to be present within one hundred days, and hold a grand council to settle upon terms of peace. There is evidently a strong desire upon their part to put an end to the war. We have received a letter from Fort Pierre from a well-informed source, addressed to a gentleman in this city, and [illegible]

The fact is, these people do not seek to fight against the Whites. For their numbers, the Sioux are less disposed to hostilities than any other Indians I have seen. After the massacre there was much sentiment that led to several acts of revenge. Indian fashion—such as the murder of the mail party, &c. When that had subsided, they were alarmed by reports of hostilities by the Government against them. As nothing was done for some time, the most reckless and mischievous among them began to imagine that there was no such intention, and that the Government was afraid. They did not believe that anything would be done, and to they presumed, talked big, and insulted traders, &c. But, after all, very few of them should be confined with this feeling and course. There are always reckless and mischievous spirits among them, besides young braves who seek to establish a name. Thus it was, until Harney attacked them on the Blue Water. They did not believe, until the work commenced, that anything of the kind would be done. That undeceived them, and even then they fought, as it were, upon compulsion, and were treated as they would have done by others. It was presumed that the Government was in earnest, and that peace had a salutary effect. In February, when the great Fur-year, takes place here, we shall no doubt see a pretty large assemblage of their chiefs to settle all difficulties, and it may result in a strong and durable peace."

Another Outrage in Florida.

By the schooner Wilson and John at Charleston, we have our teamer to Aucoma arrived at the Florida Bar. On Monday, Dec. 31, the Wilson and John arrived at Fort Dallas, Fla., and found the people in the vicinity, in a state of great excitement. The inhabitants of the surrounding country were collected in the town, and were organizing companies for protection against the Indians. The cause of the excitement was as follows: Shortly previous to the following circumstances: Shortly previous to the arrival of the Wilson and John, Thomas Johnson, with two men, whose names were unknown, went out in an open fishing boat, to the Bay, about 60 miles from the mouth of the river, where Fort Dallas is situate.

While engaged in their work, they were attacked by a band of Indians, who fired upon them, killing Johnson and one of the men, and wounding the third in the side and hand. The survivor, severely hurt, however, was then [illegible] the Indians, till he was able to peek out of their reach. Remained in hiding Fort Dallas, where he was in all glory. The alarm was spread and [illegible] in pursuit of the murderers. Night had come on, however, and the news of the Indians found its home, and [illegible]

On Tuesday, Dec. 31, [illegible] arrived at the fort, and reported the news. The Wilson and John, Capt. Hall, left Aucoma on the same day, and had been exploring the country for [illegible] from the Fort and been exploring the country for [illegible] accurate map and soundings of our river [illegible]

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—JAN. 26.

Before Recorder Tallmadge.

The Court was opened punctually at half-past 10 on Saturday morning, and, having the assistance of the Judges, by whom, in the absence of the Recorder, the business of the Court was transacted, the Grand Jury were discharged, and the Petit Jury, consisting of twenty-four persons, were called in and sworn in the usual form.

The Recorder then said: Gentlemen of the Petit Jury, the Court has thought proper to detain you from your homes on this day, the last day of your term, in order to enable you to perform a duty which devolves upon you in consequence of the action of the Grand Jury, who have found a bill against a number of persons for a conspiracy to defraud the City and Corporation of New-York. In the examination of such a case, it is necessary that the Court should be occupied a considerable time. He would, therefore, advise the Jury to provide themselves with such refreshment as may be necessary during the trial, but they would be at liberty to go to their homes at the usual opening, but proceed at once to call witnesses on the trial.

Selection of a Jury for the trial.

Samuel H. Smith, examined by Mr. Brady—I live in Jersey City; I have been there about two years; I keep a livery stable in Jersey City; I have been in the business about two years; I was in the same business in New-York; I was in the firm of Smith, Sickles & Co. about the 10th January; I did not have charge of the stable; I was in the stable occasionally; I was not a total stranger to such a conversation about the sweeping machine.

Q.—Did Mr. Smith speak to you on the subject?

Recorder Tallmadge—You need not answer. The learned gentleman objected to the testimony of this witness. The witness Smith was yesterday asked whether he had ever attempted to bribe the present witness, and he replied that he had not. They were not now trying an issue of bribery in the case of Mr. Ebling; they were not trying an issue of bribery between Mr. Smith and Mr. Purdham.

Mr. Brady, (to witness)—Did you have any conversation with Mr. Smith in the month of March, relative to the working of the machines?

District-Attorney—I object to that question. Question ruled out.

Mr. Busteed—Did Mr. Smith ever make you an offer to give you $2 a day over and above what you were receiving, if you would report favorably to Mr. Ebling about the machines?

Question ruled out, and the witness left the stand.

Morgan L. Mott, examined on Friday, was recalled by Mr. Brady—I first saw Mr. Smith in the latter part of December, 1854; I witnessed the first experiment of the street-sweeping machines; Mr. Smith he was called on; Mr. Ebling, myself, with the receipt; he called and had a conversation about the receipt; he said he did not like it; I told him he could talk to Mr. Ebling at his office; Mr. Ebling came to my office and called me in; this was on the 17th of January; Mr. Smith then stated that he had lost a great deal of money by the machines; that his partner turned him out, and that he must raise some money; he wanted to know what we would give for that paper; Mr. Ebling asked if it was worth anything to me; I told him "not a cent;" I never saw Smith in Ebling's office after that; he called on me after that, on the morning of the day before he went before the Grand Jury; he said he had this paper about him, and that it had better be got rid of; that the Mayor had sent for him, he did not know what about; the next I saw him was in the center-room of the Grand Jury; I told Mr. Ebling what Smith had said about the paper; Mr. Ebling laughed, and said he did not care about it; I have known Mr. Ebling about ten or twelve years.

Cross-examined by the District-Attorney—There was no paper exhibited when Smith came to the office; there was another paper, containing a portion of the agreement, which I think Mr. Ebling took; there were other interviews when the paper was referred to.

Direct examination resumed—Mr. Smith said he wished to have that receipt and agreement drawn out, at the time they were obtained, to show to those who furnished the money in Philadelphia that the authorities here would be favorable, provided they answered the purpose; that was before any paper was signed; I drafted the receipt without dictation, according to Smith's request, that he might have something to show; the language of that paper is mine; it was agreed that the machines at the time of the conversation in March should report; Mr. Smith said he would clear the streets of the City, for $140,000; he supposed he could get a much larger amount, and the difference, he said, should be divided between Mr. Ebling and myself; I told him I thought it could not be done for less than $200,000.

Q.—Did you expect to make anything out of it?

The District-Attorney objected. It was immaterial whether the witness expected to make a fortune or not.

Mr. Brady said they were trying a man for a State Prison offence, and it was necessary to get at the intent of that man. He should claim, on Mr. Mott's testimony, that there was no expectation of Mr. Ebling's mind of making anything out of the agreement, but that the papers were drawn solely to enable the firm of Smith, Sickles & Co. to get money from the capitalists of Philadelphia.

The District-Attorney objected that they could not get at Mr. Ebling's expectations by finding out what Mr. Mott's expectations were.

The Court ruled the question out.

Examination resumed—Mr. Smith offered $150 in April, which he said was for Mr. Ebling and myself.

Q.—Do you know whether, at the date of the paper given in evidence by the prosecution, Mr. Ebling was ignorant that he could not be interested in the contract?

The District-Attorney objected to the question.

Mr. Brady wished to show that, in good faith, Mr. Ebling did not know that he could not, according to the charter, be interested in such a contract. With respect to the theory that every man is supposed to know the law, there never was a man who knew even all the Corporation ordinances. It was the intent they were then to judge. He should insist upon that. Mr. Brady argued the point at great length, and was replied to by the District-Attorney, who contested his position that it was a mere theory to suppose that every man knows the law. It was especially a matter in criminal cases, that the ignorance of the law should never excuse, and never it was then the place of honesty called in particularly. If he was wrong, he should be prepared to say that he was doing he was supposed to be transgressing.

The Court consulted with the District-Attorney.

Mr. Busteed rose to explain.

Recorder—Gentlemen of the Jury, at the request of the learned counsel, Mr. Ebling and Mr. Smith, whom Mr. Ebling proposed that both papers should be destroyed, because they transmitted him in getting contracts; he was willing to destroy the papers, if they should destroy theirs; they agreed to bring their papers and destroy them; I think Mr. Smith brought papers.

The case for the defence ended here.

Mr. Brady addressed the Jury. He alluded to the extreme importance of the case, as affecting the character and reputation of the accused; the interest of this case is derived from the fact that this is the first prosecution under the act of 1853. This is the first time the act has come before the Court so as to allow of a definition of the same intent and expectation.

Mr. Ebling, as the prosecution will admit, is a man of the highest respectability. He is a man not likely to understand well the Charters of New-York and Brooklyn, which he was engaged in under the supervision of Mr. Ebling and his counsel. There was no affection and he said, I simply ask you to say it—that if he had been entrapped into any violation of the statute, it had occurred more unfortunately. Mr. Ebling was

THE SEA SIDE COTTAGE.

BY MRS. CONSE.

CHAPTER III.

"Florence," said Bertha, as they left the room, "I wish you would not talk so to Reginald. Surely, after waiting for him till the very last, you must feel vexed at his coming, and then, to go to a grave of thistle, dark fir, and pines, which covered a hill in the rear of his mansion!

Her thoughts were in great confusion, in fact she was saying half of what she thought.

"I wish, Bertha, you may think so nothing ill I see Reginald. Oh! I know he is a Florence, said. It may be he out make all right between us. Dear Reginald! dear Florence! I think I wish to lie down a little, my head aches so sadly. I hope I shall have a long rest to-morrow. Oh! how I have wished for such a day! I love you more than ever, Bertha, for your kindness to me."

"Poor Florence, you need it, indeed, and I hope you will have a long rest to-morrow, and I will be with you, and we will talk of Reginald, and I will try to think that he is worthy of your love, and I will try to think that I love you more than ever, Florence, for your sorrow."

"Thank you, dear Bertha, I feel better already, and I will try to be cheerful, and I will try to think that I love you more than ever, Bertha, for your kindness to me."

Bertha was struggling to appear cheerful, for she did not wish Mr. Burleigh to understand her situation, till she had conversed privately with Florence.

"Now, Bertha," said Florence, "you were so beautifully, wouldn't do it the day we were married, but now I think I shall spoil my pretty dress."

"I love music, Miss McDonald," said the gentleman, drawing the young girl towards him, and bowing his cheek to her lips.

Bertha wound a half-timid, half-mischievous kiss upon which he instantly and heartily returned; and then, with merry words and unmoved laughter, the three wended their way to the drawing-room of Florence.

"In this the Nunnatum room is the house," said the young gentleman (for making a rather a sitting-room and as you are to be one of the family, I use no ceremony with you, my dear). This gentleman intends to treat his lady-love to a little surprise on account of our great friendship and affection for each other, so, if you see them coming upon him we will ring for help to lead him to his own room. Don't you hope he'll enjoy them, Florence?"

"Nay, Florence, I should be sorry to become 'a bone of contention' in this household. If I trouble any of its inmates I shall not continue to do so after being made aware of the fact."

This was said seriously, and with a sigh. Bertha was thinking back.

Florence started. She had never seen her friend in such mood. She then noticed how pale she was, and that her eyes looked sunken and dim. The flush called up by her arrival and warm welcome was leaving Bertha's features, and the tones which such agony as she had endured always have were again becoming visible upon her face.

"Why, Bertha, what does ail you? You are tired to death and half starved with your long ride, or you are sick. You look as if you ought to be abed—won't you go and lay down? I will carry up your lunch myself, and you shall eat and drink and sleep with me close beside you."

"Thank you, dear Florence—no, I will not lie down at present. I am not tired, although I do not feel quite well. Perhaps I shall feel better after lunch, and I am certain a walk in that delightful garden will revive me more than a nap could do."

"Just as you please. I will ring for lunch at once, and we will, then, all go into the garden. It is a delightful one, Bertha, and at the lower end of it there is a large bath-house. We are going to learn to swim just as soon as the weather grows warmer. Oh! Bertha, you must not think of being sick or low-spirited here, for it is the home of happiness. Alfred and I've been talking, shall not go back to live in that old, dim, sunless castle of the first rule again. We are going to have you marry the very wisest, most agreeable and wealthy young gentleman we can find, and he is to be indicted to purchase the grounds adjoining Elm Lawn, and there you are to erect your country residence, and Alfred will sell his place in our city mansion, and then, as times, dear Bertha, our happiness will be complete."

"You can build air-castles as well as ever, I see," answered Bertha, smiling faintly. "I cannot do so, as in other days."

"Well, I shall do it for you, then. You need not call what I've been saying an 'air castle,' though, for I assure you I intend to have it all laid on a solid earthly foundation. Don't I, Alfred?"

"Yes, indeed, and Miss McDonald, you may as well give up all further care for your future fate, for Florence is determined to plan for you. She has done nothing else than talk of it since we left Elm Lawn, and she found I had settled at Elm Lawn. I think you cannot do better than resign yourself at once into her hands, for she is an unbearable general."

Lunch being now brought in, the friends partook thereof, and then sallied forth into the grounds.

The pure, fresh air revived the drooping spirits of Bertha, and her strong, brave sisters began to rally. The kind interest and affection that she thoroughly manifested in her was like healing balm to her wounded spirit; and for the remainder of the day the clouds were banished from her form and cheerfulness sparkled in her heart.

Alone in her chamber her mother overwhelmed her afresh; and she was indulging in a fit of violent weeping when Florence entered the room.

She came in smiling, and commenced speaking in a cheerful tone, but at the sight of the sobbing Bertha she stood aghast.

"Why, Bertha, what is the matter?" she asked, with much anxiety, and then she flung herself beside the prostrate form of her friend, and said, caressingly:

"Dear sister, tell me what it is that troubles you. I am sure something has gone very wrong to grieve your cheerful spirit so."

"Oh! Florence, I shall never be cheerful or happy any more. I wish there were Protestant convents, I would go and hide myself in one to-morrow, and there I would stay until death came to release me from this miserable life. Florence, I am a hopeless, and even Reginald considers me a fit subject for his mistress now. Oh! Florence, what shall I do? I wish that I was in my grave. I wish I dared to go there, for I am sick of life. I never wish to go out of this room again."

Having given our readers two installments of this tragedy, we should inform them that we have not put any name of it. The continuation of it can be found only in the New-York Ledger of Feb. 2, in which popular family paper it can be obtained complete. The Ledger is altogether the handsomest weekly published in New-York, is beautifully illustrated every week, and sold at the very low price of four cents. It employs the most popular authors, and monopolizes the literary services of Fanny Fern—that gifted lady having contracted to write for no other paper. Again we would recommend our readers to procure the Ledger of Feb. 2, which will be ready this afternoon, and for sale at all the stores where newspapers are sold throughout the City and country.

Resolved, That the members of this Society hereby unanimously express their surprise and indignation, that the members of any religious society should be so far forgetful of right, delicacy, and propriety as to publish an unanimous opinion of such an unfair, as well as offensive nature, upon a matter regarding which they had no evidence before them.

Resolved, That "as the tree is known by its fruit," and yields the like fruit according to its kind, season after season, it is therefore the firm conviction of this Society, that the individual who, in this instance, has forged the name of Mr. Stephen Knowlton, will hereafter discover and expose himself to the world, by the perpetration of kindred crimes in time to come.

Resolved, That the Clerk of this Society be requested to transmit to Mr. Knowlton our respectful recommendation that he will treat all future anonymous communications with merited contempt; and to assure him, on behalf of this Society, of the best wishes of all its members for his health and happiness.

ROSE CLARK.

FANNY FERN'S LAST WORK.

A few weeks only have elapsed since the publication of this Book, and yet our publisher already announces 25,000 copies. No work of fiction ever has sold in America during the last year has attained such success. Does not this prove the power and popularity of Fanny Fern?

Of the many papers which have reviewed "Rose Clark," a very large majority pronounce it her best production; superior even to "Ruth Hall," which, published a little more than one year since, immediately had a sale of Sixty Thousand Copies.

If newspapers did not charge so much for their space, we would all columns with enthusiastic notices of "Rose Clark." As it is, we must be satisfied with a very few, and those by notices the most favorable.

From the New-York Tribune.

Very popular, very pleasant, very easy to understand, and quite independent of the critics, as becomes so independent a body as Fanny Fern. We confess to a great liking for this author—and to none of her varied more than to this. It is pretty, extravagant, absurd as a story, and not at all overloaded with charity; yet it has a vigor of style, a succulence of fancy, a sunshine of humor, and a consummate art which might suffice for a whole library of fakes. There is a marvelous power in hitting off characters by a single stroke. A single epithet, or a few uttered words will often place a character before the reader, as sharply defined as a cameo.

From the Boston Bee.

There is a beautiful unity of design in its faults; without the tedious detail of formal dialogue to link them together. The authoress in this, shows her genius; she does what a true limner does, paints the prominent striking outlines, and leaves the magnificent fitfulness of the picture to be filled in by every observation. To our judgment, therefore, what little critics will call "want of connection," is really a great virtue—a distinguishing and honorable mark of an original mind. There is, too, great power displayed in painting characters, as well as a vast knowledge of the human heart in their fashioning. A more beautiful character than Ruth Hall does not exist in English literature; a truer artist, and a greater soul than Gertrude displayed herself, was never imagined—nor a more manly being than Dr. Ferry. They have all the humanity necessary, while they exhibit matchless examples of angelic character. Good old Mrs. Bond, too, is carefully drawn, and Capt. Lemuel became a world-full of truly rare—yes, rare—humanity. There is a superfluous lot of tears and indignation in the volume—some passages scorching hot with the author's hatred of meanness, duplicity, and hypocritical cant, while others sparkle and glow and float with unmeasured eloquence, till one finds himself at times, humbled with penitent tears, and utterly melted by a generous touch of paternal sensibility.

Taken as a whole, the book is a triumph—honorable alike to the head and heart that conceived it. Honorable to the language in which it is written—honorable to the age that produced it, and we have yet to see the work of fiction by an American female, worthy to stand beside it.

From the Boston Intelligencer.

The rise meteor of Fanny Fern has already made its mark in the world of literature; and, although a little tipped with venom, is the production of "Ruth Hall" in the work before us we find its true mission, the recording of deeds of mercy and triumphs of love. The disguise in which the lady appears, is the pen name of the darker names of her own, as of the discordant jars of her own family, we are glad to see is cast aside, and the heart, the pure, warm, earnest heart of a genuine woman bursts forth in irresistible strains of heavenly melody. Rose Clark will live when Ruth Hall is forgotten, in fresh vertues of fancy, purity of language, and of diction, originality of thought, vigor of style, and may prove to be one of the best stories of our time and worthy perusal again and again.

From the Eclectic Magazine.

It has every element of earnestness, power and satire that's the Reviewer ever evinced; a more detailed picture is seldom to be seen. It portrays the misery and sad conditions of a young charity orphan, so as to bring out in frightful relief the world's unchastened shiness, and the deformity of hypocrisy and fashion. It is intense in feeling, severely pensitful in style, with not a waste word, or an overdrawn line, and pregnant with a wise lesson.

From the Troy Whig.

The notoriety of Fanny Fern is by no means of a temporary or evanescent character. It is founded on a firm and durable basis, and will exist as long as the style of literature which gave it birth is popular in this country. Fanny has talents of a rare order. Some of her stray waifs set afloat through the medium of her newspaper contributions, would really amount to genius, if there were no, else they would never have been received with such a furore of approbation from all lovers of the beautiful in literature. Her Ruth Hall, although, from its personal character, it made for its authoress many enemies, was still a stupendous work in its way. But here, Rosa Clark exceeds by far all her previous works. It is to them the masterpiece of the finished artist, as compared with the charcoal sketches of the school-boy amateur.

HISTORY OF THE REIGN OF PHILIP II
BY WILLIAM H. PRESCOTT.
In Two Volumes 8vo. With Portrait, Maps, &c.
NINTH THOUSAND NOW READY.

The Publishers desire to call attention to a few extracts from criticisms upon Mr. Prescott's last work, both from English and American sources:

From the London Athenæum.

In addition to its substantial value as a contribution to the political, religious and social annals of Europe, it derives some of its most admirable qualities from the peculiar genius of the author. In a warmth-colored, sunny clear, flexible and full of variety—Mr. Prescott narrates the incidents of Philip's reign. His story moves swiftly but is nowhere incomplete. The personages are well grouped—the order of circumstances and the order of time are well reconciled; the events are neither confused nor isolated. The book is at once pictorial and sober, critical and dramatic.

From the Democrat, St. Louis, Mo.

What constitutes a good historical style may be considered a matter of taste, but for our own part we are decided in our preference of the simple, rhythmical and lucid style of Prescott to the flashing and monotonously brilliant writing of his great compeer, Macaulay.

From the Congregationalist.

" " That Mr. Prescott so largely possesses these qualities as to stand at the head of all living historians is our deliberate conviction.

So far from its being hard work to read his histories (and we have seldom seen histories which it was not hard work to read,) it is hard work not to read them. Once commenced, one grudges every moment which interrupts their perusal.

From the Boston Post.

Attention becomes absorbed in the story. It is so life-like, the scene delineated seems to stand out in sharp, well defined lines before the mind's eye. Such an effect is the result of no chance work. It is obtained only through long and patient labor, and a high degree of art in the difficult work of narration. It is only a master-hand that can restore and, as it were, transfigure the Past, so as to make it live in perennial freshness, and stir the varied cords of the human heart.

From the Portland Recorder.

In everything pertaining to the work, particularly in the grouping of characters and the arrangement of circumstances, there is a grace and symmetry and naturalness which we scarcely expect to find in any other author.

From the St. Louis Republican.

We know of no history written with such dramatic force and effect. The individuality of the different personages is strikingly portrayed, and indelibly impressed upon the mind of the reader.

Also, new and uniform editions of the author's previous works:

HISTORY OF THE CONQUEST OF MEXICO. In 3 vols., 8vo.

HISTORY OF THE CONQUEST OF PERU. In 3 vols., 8vo.

HISTORY OF THE REIGN OF FERDINAND AND ISABELLA. In 3 vols., 8vo.

DIX & EDWARDS would announce to the trade that their publishing establishment will be removed, this day, to the fine central position No. 321 Broadway, where they will possess every desirable facility for the prompt and methodical transaction of their business, and will be happy, to receive the calls of their friends.

IN PRESS.

And will be published in a few days, by the author of "Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England."

A JOURNEY IN THE SEABOARD SLAVE STATES. By FREDERICK LAW OLMSTEAD. 1 vol. 12mo. 736 pages, with wood cuts. Price $1 50.

The picturesque and dramatic description of Southern life and scenery with which it abounds will commend it to the persons of all classes of readers, while its full and detailed accuracy of observation in many matters of great commercial, political and moral interest establishes its permanent value as filling a long-felt gap in every library.

It is, in short, a readable and trustworthy account "of our own South, such as we have in scores of volumes of Transatlantic States of not half the interest to us; fair, calm, and courteous in its treatment of topics of controversy, though frank and unmistakable in expressing the author's own conclusions.

The Southern Quarterly predicts that this book will have "greater influence on the minds of voters," than "Uncle Tom's Cabin" ever has had.

The New-York Daily Times says of it: "This work will be by far the best yet published on the subject."

The New-Orleans Delta observes of the author: "Fully inclined as his opinions were, he was not willfully an dishonest man or an unfair writer. We would welcome a few more men of his calibre among us—prejudiced, but manly and honest."

ALSO, JUST PUBLISHED—JAGER:

THE MORMONS AT HOME—Descriptive of a tour through Eastern Utah, and of a residence at the Great Salt Lake City, by the wife of the late United States Commissioner for Utah.

Portions of this work have appeared in "Putnam's Monthly," and have been received by the press and the public with the strongest evidence of approbation and interest. The facilities enjoyed by the author for appreciating the general public policy of the Mormon leaders, and for observing the effect of this policy upon the interior social and family life of the people, were such as secure for her report peculiar and permanent value.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, "The Glance of Love, Bonny." Words by Miss FANNIE KEAR; Music by EDWARD HAMILTON. Price 25 cents. "Bonny" is out at last, and his receipts look transcendent with the shower of so finely arranged a melody as transpires from the pen of this favorite composer.

ASHES—Have not varied much. The demand is limited; prices are supported. The inspection week commences to-day. We quote Pearls, and 100 bbls. Pots, together, 651 bbls.

COFFEE—The demand to still title at steady rates, mainly for Rio, of which 300 bags have been sold since our last, at 11c.@11¼c. ⅌ lb. The sales besides include 500 pkgs. Java, at 14c.@14¼c.; and 150 bags St. Domingo at about 14¼c. ⅌ lb.

FLOUR AND MEAL—The market for State and Western Flour is quiet and languid. The demand is fair for home use, but is very lame for shipment. The receipts are light, but the available stock here is by no means for the season, and little being freely offered. Prices show no material change, though still leaning in favor of buyers. The sales since our last comprise about 3,000 bbls., chiefly at rates within the annexed range.

HAY—Is salable and firm.

HIDES—Mr. H. D. HULL says there are no new features to notice in the Hide market this week. The demand has been fair for all descriptions, as will be seen by the annexed sales, and prices have been fully sustained, leaving but few common Hides on hand. The principal receipts have been from Orinoco, and the balance of the cargo of the Samuel & Edward, ashore at Sandy Hook, which were brought up in lighters and dried, mostly in good order. There is still considerable difficulty in shipping Hides to the interior, which has a tendency to restrict the sales, but importers manifest no anxiety to force sales, anticipating a better demand towards the opening of canal navigation. The Frisia, which was expected from Buenos Ayres, was reported abandoned at sea. Her cargo was mostly sold to arrive. Receipts have been 24,400 from foreign ports, as follows: 16,000 Orinoco, ⅌ Texas; 5,100 Tampico, ⅌ Palmer; 12,800 Montevideo, from the Samuel & Edward, (part of which were sold previous to arrival) 500 Savanilla, ⅌ Putnam; and 1,000 from the West Indies and domestic ports, making a total of 43,700 Hides. Sales are: 4,500 dry Buenos Ayres, 30½ lbs. at 26c., 6 months, usual selection; 6,300 dry Rio Grande, 22 lbs. at 25c @25¼c. 6 months, usual selection, part in bond less 8½ duty; 1,400 dry Montevideo, 30½ lbs. at 26c. 6 months, usual selection; 2,550 dry salted Bahia, 50 lbs. at 17½c. 6 months, usual selection; 600 dry Gambia & Sinsun, 9 lbs. at 20c., 6 months, usual selection; 500 dry salted Tampico, 27 lbs. at 19½c., 6 months, usual selection; 1,600 Rocked Carthagena, wormed, 22 lbs. at 14½c., 6 months, as they run; 422 dry salted Maracaibo, 36 lbs. at 17½c., 6 months, as they run; 1,241 dry Savanilla, 22 lbs. at 19c., 6 months, rejecting water damaged; 900 dry Maracaibo, 34 lbs. at 20c., 6 months, rejecting water damaged; 1,800 dry salted Southern, 16 lbs. at 16c.@16½c., cash, rejecting water damaged; 800 dry salted Southern, 26 lbs. at 19½c., cash; rejecting water damaged; 250 wet salted St. Ubes, 70 lbs. at 9c., cash; 350 wet salted Western, 70 lbs. at 8½c., cash, less 4 ⅌ cent.; 425 wet salted Western, 60 lbs. at 9½c., 6 months; 10 bales Calcutta Buffalo, at 14½c., 6 months; 1,900 green salted B. A. Hides, on private terms, and 800 green salted S. G. Cow, 50 lbs. at 13½c., 6 months, both to go East. Expected to arrive shortly at this port: The Tasnadhel, from Buenos Ayres, with 16,000 hides; the W. A. Kibby, from Rio Grande, with 8,000 hides; the Correo, from Orinoco, with 12,000 hides; the Westbrook, from Savanilla, with 2,000 hides; the Addy Swift, from Maracaibo, with 2,000 hides, and others. The stock on hand of Ox and Cow Hides is 61,700, as follows: 6,000 dry Buenos Ayres and Montevideo; 2,200 dry Rio Grande; 32,900 dry Orinoco; 1,000 dry Savanilla; 900 dry San Juan; 4,500 dry Bahia; 4,600 dry Mexican; 2,000 dry West India, Southern, &c.; 500 salted Para.

HOPS—Unchanged.

IRON—Quiet, but stiffly held.

LATHS—Scarce and inactive, at old rates.

LEAD—Nothing really new to report.

LEATHER—Mr. HULL informs us that "the receipts continue light, partly owing to the severe weather, tanners not having been able to dry and finish their stock. The demand has been fully equal to the receipts, and prices are well sustained, with an upward tendency. The stock is very light, and but a meagre assortment, many dealers not receiving sufficient to supply their orders. Southern Oak is in fair demand, at 25c.@26½c., at which price some 1,800 sides were sold. Receipts of Hemlock, 32,900; of Oak, 2,250. Sales of Hemlock, 35,900; of Oak, 5,450. Stock of Hemlock, 38,300; of Oak, 6,300. We quote: Oak Slaughter and Salted, good light, 27c.@30c.; Oak Slaughter and Salted, good middle, 27c.@31c.; Oak Slaughter and Salted, good heavy, 27c.@30c.; Oak Slaughter, Spanish, good all weights, 24c.@28c.; Hemlock, Buenos Ayres, &c., good light, 24½c.@25c.; Hemlock, Buenos Ayres, &c., good middle, 25½c.@26c.; Hemlock, Buenos Ayres, &c., good heavy, 23c.@24c.; Hemlock, Orinoco, &c., good light, 23½c.@24c.; Hemlock, Orinoco, &c., good middle, 23½c.@24½c.; Hemlock, Orinoco, &c., good heavy, 22½c.@23½c.; Hemlock, Orinoco, and Buenos Ayres Damaged, all weights, 19c.@22c.; Hemlock, Orinoco, and Buenos Ayres Poor, all weights, 11c.@14c.; Hemlock Slaughter, in rough, 28½c.@29c.; on six months' credit.

LIME—Unaltered.

MOLASSES—There have been 600 pbls. New-Orleans purchased, at 44c.@46c. ⅌ gallon.

NAVAL STORES—Crude Turpentine is in better request, and is now worth $3 12½@$3 87½ ⅌ 280 lbs. Spirits do. is also in fair demand and is steady at 41c.@42c., mostly at 41c. ⅌ gallon. Tar is selling pretty freely at full rates. No particular alteration has occurred in Resin.

OILS—The market generally remains as previously reported.

PROVISIONS—Pork is in very slack demand and is quite dull, though decidedly cheaper. The sales since our last reach only about 500 bbls., in lots, at $15 12½@$15 25 for Mess, and $14 for Prime ⅌ bbl. Towards the close many holders were willing to sell large lots at our lowest quotations, but buyers would not pay for such within 1½c.@2c. ⅌ lbs. Of these figures Dressed Hogs are in good demand and steady, at 7¾c.@8c. ⅌ lb. Cut Meats are plenty and heavy at 8¾c.@9¼c. for Hams, and 7¾c.@7½c for Shoulders. ⅌ lb. Bacon is pretty brisk and buoyant, with a small stock, at 9c.@10½c., to arrive and on the spot, as in quality. ⅌ lb. Lard is dull and lower, with sales of 400 bbls. good to strictly prime, at 10¾c.@11½c. ⅌ lb. Beef is abundant and languid, the sales since our last including only 300 bbls. at from $9@$9 75 for Country Prime; $10 87½@$11 75 for do. Mess, and $13 50@$14 25 for repacked do., ⅌ bbl. Prime Mess Beef is inactive and depressed at from $16@$18 ⅌ bbl. Butter is moderately inquired for, and is firm, at 18c.@23c. for Ohio; 20c.@21c. for Common to very good State; and 23c.@30c. for Prime and Choice do., ⅌ lb. Cheese is selling pretty freely at 8c.@10½c. ⅌ lb.

RICE—Is more freely offered, and it favors buyers. 500 tcs. were procured at $4 62½@$5 50 ⅌ 100 lbs.

SKINS—Mr. HULL sums up this week's business thus: "GOAT—The market continues quite bare of almost every description of Skin. The cargo of Tampico, which are expected, will no doubt command full prices. I have no sales to notice. DEER—Domestic Skins are coming in more freely, and sell readily on arrival at current rates; but, with the exception of 24 bales Bolivar, there is no stock of Foreign in first hands. Sales comprise 4,500 lbs. Western, at 20c.@20½c., cash, and a small parcel of San Juan at 50c."
